A deep and stunning story about a musician girl in love with her art and with the pure joy of living. It is about her journey... It is about how her parents supported her in the trance she had to go through when she learned she was destined to lose her ear forever. About her courage and determination not to let that event snatch her two passions: that of living and playing her harp. We will attest how she was able to achieve it with the unrelenting support of those around her.

Written from the authority conferred by being a harp teacher for over 25 years, who has taught hundreds of young students. The play is based on a real life artist who entrusted to the author her own early life as a musician. The narrative is crafted in a personal tone that resembles that of a self-discovery, and a confession at the same time. The setting, the course of the story and its radiant outcome, are designed to drive new discoveries for the young boys and girls who have embraced the music forever. No matter what happens next
