Mellie's having a quarter-life crisis. It's to the point that she's taking life advice from Shane Brodie, the notorious village flirt, who's trying desperately to get to the eighteenth century to keep Catie Ferguson from marrying anyone but him.

She not only decides to help Shane go back in time, but agrees to go with him as part of his plan to distract Catie's posh English suitor. It won't be too much of a chore since Oliver is exactly what Mellie's always wanted in a man.

If she isn't eaten up with guilt over betraying her friends, doesn't freeze to death in the forest, and can manage to keep from screwing up history (or the future!), she might just find what she needs to be happy.

In the present, Piper's going nuts trying to plan Evie's wedding, which has completely put her off wanting to plan her own, much to Lachlan's dismay.

Evie can't find the perfect dress and is beginning to wonder why she wanted a big wedding in the first place. Will Sam ever get a ring on her finger?
