An affair built on an un-kept promise... A marriage that defines one sister, while diminishing the other... A remedy of inconvenient convenience...A sisterly loyalty that both festers and thrives in guilt.

Sisters, Lillian and Lindersyl Gottlieb are fifty-something-year-old Black women with everything: Prestige, wealth, men and a family legacy held globally in high esteem. The "stuff" that makes for Essence and Time magazine articles about beautiful, powerful women, the "Gottlieb girls" are perfect - provided they are kept as far from one another as possible. But when an innocent business trip brings Lindersyl back to her family estate after a forced 17-year exodus, secrets, lies, and not so neatly packaged family ties begin to unravel. With her niece Grier in tow, Lindersyl treads back to Gottlieb Grove to face Lillian and her brother-in-law Johnathan Holland, whose mal-union of thirty-four years ignites in animosity at the mere mention of her name. As the Gottlieb-Holland offspring (Grier, Eisendorff, and Chasen) attempt to marry their family's surreptitious past with the dissonant melodrama playing out before them, their lives spin out of control. Will blood prove thicker than water? Or will the besotted love of a once-forbidden union blindly push the sisters to a breaking point? Fester lilies that fester stink worse than weeds
